

JAPAN AND SOVIET RUSSIA ALREADY HAVE FOUGHT MORE THAN 400 BLOODY BATTLES IN AN UNDECLARED WARFARE

Russia's Far Eastern Air Fleet Consists of 2,000 Planes — Preparations Being Made for War Which is Inevitable Between the Two, Says Writer

(Note: Japan and Soviet Russia have already fought no less than 400 bloody battles in the undeclared warfare raging along the frontiers of Manchukuo and Mongolia, H. R. Knickerbocker, the noted foreign correspondent of International News Service reveals in the tenth of his latest series. Along with this startling revelation, Knickerbocker discloses for the first time that Russia's Far Eastern air fleet consists of 2,000 planes and describes in graphic detail the preparations now being made for the war which is inevitable. Knickerbocker has just returned to Paris after a 12,500-mile trip across Asia and Europe, undertaken to report on "The Yellow Typhoon and Red Storm Warnings.")

PARIS, Jan. 27.—(INS).—There are nearly 1,000,000 soldiers in the Far Eastern Red Army today and Japan has nearly 1,000,000 soldiers on the continent. No such concentration of forces has taken place since Europe's last great war.

Only half of the Japanese forces in the field are now fighting China, about 250,000 in North China and another 250,000 in the Shanghai-Nanking area. The other 500,000 are concentrated along the Manchurian-Siberian and outer Mongolian borders, facing the million strong Far Eastern army.

In miniature the Russo-Japanese war has been going on for three years. During that period, according to the official Japanese record, the two armies have fought 400 engagements. Thousands have been killed in these fights of which the world for the most part hears nothing, and in one case the Red army claims to have wiped out an entire regiment of Japanese.

Yet they are not "at war," and will not go to war until the Japanese army is ready to strike. The Red army will not move until it is attacked. This is the inevitable policy of the Kremlin today. Neither will it help China except in supplies, airplanes and munitions in quantities too small, and coming too late to make any real difference to Chiang Kai-Shek, whom Stalin and Marshal Vassily Bloukh-Galen, commander-in-chief of the Far Eastern army, have every reason to hate personally for his betrayal of the Soviets in 1926.

According to the latest official report of the Japanese, they had "280 cases of what they politely call 'border troubles'" with the Red army in 1935, 30 in 1936 and in the first six months of 1937 they had 80. Although the record is not up to date, it is safe to say that it adds up to well over 400 by now.

Only a tiny fraction of these fights have been announced by Moscow or Tokyo. Were there a free press in either country they must have incited the population to war long ago. As it is, the two armies are constantly engaged in testing each other out, making forays across the border, shooting up frontier posts, and occasionally coming over with bombing planes to inflict extra painful injury.

Red army men proudly told me that "not long ago" a squadron of Red bombers flew from outer Mongolia to punish a Japanese force which had impudently pushed across the frontier from Chahar, and had "destroyed a regiment." Exaggerated though it may be, such a report gives an idea of the feelings of the contestants, if not a reliable estimate of the scale of hostilities.

The record proves that no "frontier incident" will ever start the war. It will only begin when the Japanese are convinced the right time has come. That time will come logically, after the Japanese have finished up their mop-up in China, and have consolidated their rear, while it should come before the Russians complete their second Trans-Siberian Railway line, and before the Red Army has recovered from what the Japanese believe to have been the serious effects of the execution of the eight Red generals upon the Red army's morale and leadership.

If it were left up to the Kwantung army, as the Japanese call their forces in Manchuria, the war might start today. The Kwantung army, composed of the best Japanese regulars, is intended to fight the Soviet Union. The less serious affair in China was handled mostly by Japanese reserves.

The leader of the Kwantung army have always behaved with the utmost independence of Tokyo. In 1931, when

CLUBWOMEN TO PROMOTE SAFETY ON HIGHWAYS

Prizes of $10 and $5 Offered To Clubs Showing Outstanding Work

CONFERENCE IS HELD

To the two women's clubs of Bucks County which show the most outstanding work in connection with promoting highway safety, first and second prizes of $10 and $5 are to be presented. This was made known by Mrs. Calvin S. Boyer, Doylestown, when the mid-Winter conference of the Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs was held in Doylestown, this week.

A discussion occurred as to ways and means of extending this program, such as safety instruction in all schools, safety patrol system in all schools, the making of safety posters in the schools, safety programs for the clubs, discussion of causes of traffic accidents, the importance of having local ordinances prohibiting young children from riding on the handlebars of bicycles, and procuring the co-operation of motion picture managers by showing pictures on highway safety.

With the slogan, "Know Pennsylvania First, Then Make Pennsylvania First," arrangements were made under the direction of Miss Bessie Phillips, Lumberville, to procure interesting and valuable historical information as Bucks county's share in this State club project in fine arts, which covers writers, literary shrines, libraries, little theatres, musicians, dancers, painters and craftsmen, mural paintings, stained glass windows, art museums, types of architecture, doorways and windows, bridges, sculptors, monuments and markers and fountains.

Mrs. Daniel H. Erdman, Quakertown, chairman of scholarship, reported the fine work being done in assisting worthy students through college, and of plans to continue the work.

Luncheon was served to 40 women and between courses Mrs. Samuel L. Althouse, Sellersville, conducted a quiz, in which presidents expressed the objectives of their clubs and the relationship between the clubs and the communities.

There was an almost perfect attendance of officers, directors, past presidents and members.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY

More than 800 sportsmen from various sections of Bucks county will be on hand tonight when the annual meeting and smoker of the Bucks County Fish, Game and Forestry Association will be held in the Doylestown Armory, starting at 7:30 p. m. Members of the Pennsylvania Game and Fish Commissions will be present to discuss important topics. They will include Nicholas Biddle, president of the Commission; R. A. McCachran, assistant director of the Bureau of Land and Refuges; Charles Wellington Wessell, chief of the Bureau of Propagation and Game Farms; Richard Gerstell, chief of the Bureau of Research and Distribution. Officers for 1938 will be elected.

Coroner H. Clayton Moyer, of Bucks county, issued a certificate of death due to a heart attack in the case of Rose Phillips, 68, widely-known trained nurse, who was found dead in bed at her home in Spring Valley two days ago. She was a nurse at the Doylestown Hospital for several years. Burial will take place tomorrow in Philadelphia.

The Bolshevik revolution reached peaceful, unsuspecting Quakertown yesterday.

With Bucks county radicals lined up on one side and Quakertown businessmen and the American Legion post on the other, the second Battle of Quakertown was on.

The issue is whether the anniversary of Lenin's death will be celebrated next Friday.

"This isn't Soviet Russia and there will be no celebration," was the ultimatum handed to radicals as their lease of Moose Hall was canceled yesterday.

"We'll hold the meeting in some other hall, or on a street corner if necessary," retorted Mrs. Ella Reeve Bloor, white-haired 75-year-old radical labor organizer, who is scheduled to speak.

So Quakertown, most of which never even heard of Lenin, is waiting for Friday evening.

A cancer research forum was held in St. James' Lutheran Church, Chalfont, with about 75 people present.

The speaker of the evening was Dr. Stanley P. Reimann, Philadelphia, head of the cancer research department of the Lenox Hill Hospital.

Mark First Anniversary Of Eddington Chapel

EDDINGTON, Jan. 27.—Yesterday marked the first anniversary of the small chapel constructed in the basement of the Eddington Christ Church. During the year there were a total of 129 services conducted in the chapel, with a total of 783 persons attending during the year.

The Rev. Arthur F. Gibson, rector of Christ Church, feels that these figures indicate the need that existed for the chapel before its completion. He also feels satisfied with the record for the first year, but hopes to see the attendance figures doubled when the second anniversary is celebrated.

SPORT FANS HEAR JOHNNY QUINN SPEAK

American League Umpire Is Guest Speaker at Knights of Columbus Affair

BASEBALL AIDS YOUTHS

Sport fans of this vicinity were treated to the 1937 edition of the American Baseball League motion picture film, "Batters Up," last night at the Knights of Columbus home as that organization held its annual sports night.

In addition to the two-reel film, the fans were given some "inside dope" on baseball by Johnny Quinn, American League umpire, and "Bill" Phillips, newly-appointed commissioner of semi-pro baseball of Pennsylvania.

Quinn spoke of the training trip of the A's last spring in Mexico, and spoke of the numerous times the team had to be guarded to prevent uprisings. He spoke of one game in particular where the team traveled two hundred and seventy-five miles to play a game and after it was over discovered that a general of the army had disappeared with the money.

A complaint to the American ambassador only brought out the fact that the players were lucky enough to be alive to complain.

"Baseball is doing its share in raising the youths of this nation to better themselves and all organizations should get behind every sport movement to help turn out better citizens and keep the youngsters off the streets," stated the American League arbiter.

He highly praised the American Legion organizations for sponsoring junior baseball leagues and brought out the facts that many recent additions to the big leagues are graduates of the Legion leagues.

"After doing its share of bringing the youths off the streets during the day, the American Legion is now turning its attention to night-time and is organizing junior basketball leagues and deserves plenty of credit for doing so."

"But," the speaker continued, "The American Legion should not be the only organization to do this but all should, no matter what the cost."

Before closing, Quinn spoke of the new American League baseball and of the complaints it is receiving but told the audience that most of the complaints are merely mental.

He added that he hopes to see many Bristol boys turn out for the baseball school which will be held in Philadelphia this season.

Mr. Phillips spoke of the district tournaments which will be held throughout Pennsylvania as well as every other state in the union in regards to the national semi-pro tournament which started in the state of Texas several years ago.

Phillips expects several Bristol teams to enter the southeastern Pennsylvania district and spoke of the calibre of teams which are expected to enter. The finals of the tourney will be held in Wichita, Kansas.

The speaker told of the financial arrangements for the teams and stated that every team that entered would receive a prize.

The chairman of the committee in charge of the affair was Arthur Brady and Paul Barrett acted as toastmaster.

SIX YOUNG MEN ADMIT ROBBERIES TO JUDGE BOYER

Three of the Defendants Were Residents of Doylestown Borough

GRANTS FIVE DIVORCES

Recommits Another Case For Further Testimony As To Libellant's Residence

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 27.—Six boys pleaded guilty before Judge Calvin S. Boyer yesterday to charges of stealing gasoline, canned goods and household valuables in a series of robberies in central Bucks County during December last year.

Judge Boyer also granted five divorces upon payment of the costs and recommitted another case to the master for further testimony as to the libellant's residence in Bucks County.

The six boys are George DeHaven, Lewis DeHaven, Buckingham; Edward Wodock, Francis Johnson, Charles Wynne, Doylestown, and Alfred Fretz, Yardley. Burglary, felonious entry and receiving stolen goods are charges against the defendants.

The defendant Wodock, 21, married, told Judge Boyer that all the offenses, about fifteen in number, were committed in about two weeks. He testified that the gang traveled in his automobile at night, stealing gasoline and oil, and using the fuel to continue on night after night in a two-weeks escapade. Considerable gasoline was stolen from Joseph J. Stever's place at Buckingham, and the Fred Reams storage tank in Doylestown township.

The defendant, Wodock, was represented by John L. DuBois, Doylestown attorney. Fretz was represented by Miss Emily Mae Goodling, Doylestown.

Silverware was stolen from one house, it was testified. Wodock told Judge Boyer that two nights before he was caught he had made up his mind to quit stealing.

Harry S. Hobensack, Deputy Register of Wills, and Horace E. Gwinner, Bucks County Probation officer, testified in behalf of the defendant, Wodock, that before this trouble, they knew Wodock's reputation to be good.

Alfred Fretz, formerly of New Britain testified that he first suggested going to the Reams storage tanks, because he "knew the place."

Trooper Haman, of the Doylestown sub-station of Motor Police, testified for the Commonwealth.

Fretz told Judge Boyer that "funds were low and they needed gasoline to run their car."

Both Wodock and Fretz said they had never been in trouble before.

"Didn't you ever stop to think what might happen to you, if caught?" Judge Boyer asked Fretz.

"No, I just didn't think at the time," Fretz replied.

Albert Drexel, superintendent of the Victor hosiery plant at New Britain, testified that Fretz's reputation has been very good, and that he is an intelligent and honest worker. Harold Barndt, Doylestown, gave similar testimony.

The case had not been disposed of at noon.

Judge Boyer granted divorces as follows:

Christian Frebe, of Bristol township, libellant, vs. Lora J. Frebe, Tullytown, respondent, divorce. Master's report approved. Decree on payments of costs.

Samuel Horace Haney, Doylestown, libellant, vs. Ruth E. Haney, Doylestown, divorce. Master's report approved. Decree on payment of costs.

Sarah Albright, Bedminster township, libellant, vs. James Albright, Allentown, respondent, divorce. Master's report approved. Decree on payment of costs.

Margaret Ruth Jamison, South Langhorne, libellant, vs. Robert Jamison, Jr., Woodside, respondent, divorce. Master's report approved. Decree on payment of costs.

Alvino Defazio Stowman, Lower Southampton township, libellant, vs. George Taylor Stowman, Torresdale, respondent, divorce. Master's report approved. Decree on payment of costs.

Vera J. Wallace, James Manor, libellant, vs. Robert Bruce Wallace, Philadelphia, respondent, divorce. Recommended to Master for further testimony as to libellant's residence in Bucks county.

IN TROUBLED EAST

While Tokyo serves notice of "a major readjustment" of Japanese policy toward the United States and other Western powers in connection with "pacification" of China, Shanghai reports that foreign importers
there fear the Chinese market will be flooded with duty-free Japanese goods, now that Japan controls the trade gateway to China.

Such fears undoubtedly are well grounded; for Japan is not going to the great trouble and vast expense of "pacifying" China without hope of substantial remuneration in the way of trade advantages. Complete victory, of course, would make it possible for Japan to extend those advantages to something approaching monopoly of Chinese markets.

In the meantime, Dr. H. H.
Kung, described as "China's second most powerful leader," emphatically declares that "all current talk of Chinese-Japanese peace, which apparently is inspired by Tokyo and Berlin, is utterly baseless." Dr.
Kung seems acutely aware of the Significance of the "Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axis"; but he is not greatly concerned about the financial aspects of that "anti-Communist" alignment, Dr. Kung observes.

"While China has succeeded regularly in obtaining financial assistance and credits abroad, Japan has failed utterly to secure foreign help.
Even Italy and Germany have been unable to extend Japan loans because they lack money themselves.
China, on the other hand, has resources to carry on the war for three years."

Japan, Dr. Kung predicted, would have to resort to inflation in order to finance a prolonged war.
Tokyo, no doubt, is keenly alive to the financial problems ahead; but is counting on military conquest to clear the way for a Chinese regime
which "will co-operate fully for adjustment of Chinese-Japanese relations and for the rebuilding of a rejuvenated China."

When Tokyo talks of "Chinese-Japanese relations," it is with Japanese trade ascendency as well as Japanese political domination in mind. But, first, Japan must get China to a position to be "rejuvenated." Inasmuch as the Chinese have spent the greater part of the last quarter century fighting one another, it seems reasonable to suppose that they will not permit a few months of warfare to weary them
of fighting the Japanese.

Doubtless the first duty of a good missionary is to turn the papers
from back home.

It's much better to return early.
Then there's no suspicion that you just got tired of reading.

A statistician is listing the common causes of fatigue and exhaustion doesn't overlook reading.

The reason tobacco kills some people, apparently, is because they snitch it from their great-grandchildren.

But every time in a while you run across an old-fashioned girl who tells her parents where she is going.

Old-fashioned as we are, we still prefer the clinging vine that chooses
a sturdy oak instead of a lamp-post.

Anyhow, supporters of the antilynching bill will know they have been in a fight when the Southern senators finally let it come to a vote.

The so-called "coalition" in the Senate has caused more surprises than one. And it begins to look as though it will cause plenty more.

In the first place, premature publicity on such a thing usually does much to stop it. That would have been more true in this instance if the coalitionists had been attempting to obtain signatures on the dotted line.
But despite what has been written to that effect, the backers of the now famous 10-point program put it forward only as something that might be a yardstick in helping Senators determine their stand on various public questions.

The fact is that the publicity did not hurt the coalitionists at all. It simply enabled them to say publicly what they were saying privately. And newspapermen, once the thing reached the stage of public debate, were impressed with the sincerity of those who support the plan.

As a matter of fact, the 10-point program was the kind of a program which almost any legislator—except one with socialistic or collectivistic tendencies
—could accept and approve. In short,
it was just another way of stating things which are accepted by all who believe in a Constitutional, democratic form of government, regardless of their political tie-ups.

Incidentally, the program as proposed by the coalitionists was not far different than that adopted a few weeks before in New York by the nation's manufacturers at the Congress of American Industry. The Senate program called for:

Tax revisions; steps toward a balanced budget; impartiality by government if it is forced into employer-employee relationship; elimination or limitation of government competition in private enterprise; maintenance of competition rather than monopoly;
stabilization of values; assurance that taxes will not be increased; recognition of state rights; ample relief economically administered, and preservation of the American system of private enterprise and initiative.

One thing sure, the "coalition" program has not been side-tracked. Its progress has been slowed but the law has not yet been heard of it—by far.

Despite the remarkable defeat dealt
the wage-hour bill during the special session of Congress, folks already are beating the bushes to find out how some such legislation can be put through the regular session.

Some Washington officials hope that while the Congressmen were back home they found public sentiment to be strongly in favor of the legislation.
But others remember that Congressmen were supposed, during the recess between the regular and special sessions, to get all pepped up about the administration's legislative program and push it through. Instead, Congress continued to follow the policy of making its own decisions. And although it advanced much legislation, it refused to simply write "O. K." on anything.

The astounding thing about the wage-hour fight is nobody can find out who really wants it. Congress doesn't.
Industry doesn't, and the two leading labor organizations are far from enthusiastic about it. Yet the proposal lives on and on.

"Women In Love" by May Christie

CHAPTER XX

"We aren't so poor that we couldn't have given her a quiet
home wedding," said Dad.

Thought Ann: "I shall burst out crying in another minute!" But she contrived to smile—to carry it off successfully.

"Home weddings are old-fashioned, my love. Freddie and your beautiful doctor just upped and did it, with no frills or nonsense. Honestly, that's much the more sensible method. And so economical!"

"Can he support her, Ann?"

"Decidedly he can, if he has a mind to work. And now he's married, he will work. Freddie's got great creative talent."

"I—he seemed—irresponsible—light-minded. Maybe I'm mistaken?"

"Dad was so pathetic."

"He's what Bernice wanted, and she's got him, and you and I'll have to make the very best of it. You know, when a man loves a girl,
wonders can be performed."

He kissed her. He understood her—at least, better than he understood his other womenfolk. He wanted to tell her how much he appreciated her loyalty, that she was true-blue, but words did not come easily to James Delafield. Where his feelings were involved, he was marticulate.

A spot of comfort in the elopement was that, now she was a married woman, Bernice would resign
her job of cocktail-hostess in "The Laughing Pig."

Now the columnist's secretary,
due to a poor telephonic connection,
had not caught the given name of the bride. She had met Ann Delafield once at a party, and had thought it was Ann who had just got married. So the youngest Dela-field's name was in the column, in the midnight edition of the morning
tabloid, as the wife of Freddie Brandon, "well-known Park Avenue Playboy."

The mistake, of course, was recti-fied in the breakfast edition of the paper, due to Bernice's and Ann's sails.

But when Ann walked into her department at the store that morning, Renita Parrish had already spread the news around that she was married!

"Not I. My sister," explained
Ann.

This was a sore disappointment to Renita Parrish. And it was not alone Renita who had read the item in the paper. Paul Bradley had seen it! Gordon Gavin likewise!

The shock of Ann's supposed marriage had impelled Gordon to call up Renita the previous evening.

"What about lunching with me tomorrow? The Golden Eagle at one o'clock, Renita. Lonely and disheartened, it was comforting to get her quick response.

"Ann Delafield's married. It's in tonight's paper. Did you see it, Gordon?" she had quavered, after a long pause.

"Why, no!" He contrived to sound nonchalant.

"To someone called Freddie Brandon. I guess she won't ever be coming back to work in the store." Keep the triumph out of her voice! Ah!
Now she would have her innings, at last!

"I don't know him. To the devil
with him anyway," Gordon said,
gruffly.

She thought: "He never really cared for her! It was only silly store gossip!"

From the stockroom she borrowed
a beautiful gown for luncheon.

Gordon had two cocktails on the table when she arrived. He was usually abstemious. She wondered
... was it the news of Ann's wedding that had made him want the stimulant, or was it to please her—Renita?

She thought: "I won't tell him it was a false alarm—that it was her sister, and not Ann who got married!"

He was very nice to Renita during luncheon, Gay, in fact.
He complimented her on her gown. Black—a sleek black with a silver fox collar.

"I ought to look well," beamed
Renita proudly, "it's expensive, Gordon. But then I'm getting a very good salary."

Would that fetch him? Nice to have a wife who could earn real money in these times of depression!

Now Miss Shellfish had seen Renita's exit in the gown, and knowing it was bespoken by a customer,
had been much annoyed.

Borrowings were getting to be much too frequent. She'll have to put a stop to it.

Twenty minutes later, the customer came back to see the dress,
saying it would need a couple of alterations.

"Ann, for the love of Pete, dash
over to the Golden Eagle and get hold of Renita. Tell her to come right back with that gown she's borrowed—it was to be kept for a customer, and she's here, waiting for it. The gown should never have gone back to the stockroom. It's too bad!"

The Golden Eagle was close by.
It was a popular eating place of the executives. As Ann pushed through the revolving glass doors, she saw Gordon Gavin in a prominent spot in the center of the restaurant, sitting alone.

"Gordon, have you seen Renita?
I've a message for her. It's important."

He flushed. Ann, of all people?
The bride of a few days?

Renita's just gone to the cloakroom to powder her nose."

"You mean she's with you?"

"Certainly she's lunching with me. Why shouldn't she? Any objection?"

"Of course not."

He didn't ask her to sit down. He was staring at her, a strange look on his face.

The marriage announcement? He had seen it? That explained things.
Better enlighten him and kill the nonsensical story at once.

"You know my sister Bernice has just married Freddie Brandon? By an error, my name appeared in one edition of a paper as the bride. It was corrected in this morning's edition. Such a silly mix-up—" Ann said lightly.

His face changed.

"Then you're—"

"Single, heartwhole, and fancy
free!"

"Did you come here to meet Bradley? Was that it?"

She followed the direction of his gaze, and saw the merchandise-manager enter the restaurant.

"If he sees those cocktails on the table, Renita and you will get into trouble, Gordon."

"Don't get excited. If you aren't meeting His High-and-Mightiness, won't you sit down?"

She did so. She signalled a waiter. "Quick, remove the drinks
from the table."

But it was too late. Paul Bradley was looking directly at them,
saw the drinks.

Renita did not appear at the store
the next day, or the following one.

"She's sick. Someone ought to be looking after her. I think she has the flu or something," one of the salesgirls told Ann.

"Drink's what's the matter with Renita," said Miss Shellfish, "if she doesn't show up tomorrow morning,
orders have come from higher up
that she's to be fired."

The buyer of Misses' Dresses and Ann were alone at the moment.

"Maybe if I went down and had a talk with her, I could straighten her out a little," Ann volunteered.

"Kind of you, dear, but I guess
you'd get an unpleasant reception.
Renita can be mighty nasty when she's drinking. It's a sad case, because she's right smart, normally,
but now she's all shot to pieces."

The thought of Renita, alone in her little apartment in the Village, haunted Ann all day long. Unwittingly, wasn't she herself responsible for the other's love disappointment, since, had she not come into the store to work, Gordon Gavin might have turned to Renita in the end?

"If only I could do something to set matters right!"

Was there any solution?
At the closing of the store, Ann telephoned Renita's apartment.

Renita was weeping.

"What's the matter, Renita?"

"I'm sick in bed."

"Is there anything you'd like me to bring you? Compassion got the better of Ann's snar judgment."

"A bottle of Scotch—or no—hold on—a bottle of poison! I'm not going on with things! I'm finished."

"What do you mean?"

"That I'm going to kill myself.
You needn't bother bringing this poison, for I've powders right here with me." There was the sound of a fall—and then a buzzing on the line.

"Operator! Get me that number again. Stuyvesant 9-0026."

"I can't. I can't get the party.
The receiver's off the hook."

Alarmed, Ann left her booth in the drugstore, and took a taxi down to Greenwich Village.

It was a walk-up apartment. In answer to her ring, Renita herself opened the door.

Her mood had changed. Renita was brighter. She even seemed rather pleased at seeing Ann, and asked her to come in, apologizing for having frightened her on the telephone.

"Renita, you've got to pull yourself together. If you don't get to the store by tomorrow morning, I'm afraid you'll lose your job. Please don't think I'm interfering, but it was Miss Shellfish who told me, and she's worried. She says you're so

Japan and Soviet Russia Already Have Fought More Than 400 Bloody Battles

Tokio wavered in its determination to take Manchuria, the Kwantung army leaders settled the matter with an ultimatum that if Tokyo did not want to seize Manchuria the Kwantung army would do it alone and present the little gift to his imperial majesty, and then how would the government feel? The government felt like going ahead.

At any moment the Kwantung army might repeat this maneuver but the likelihood is that it will wait for the completion of the Chinese campaign, now that it has been convinced that the Red army is not going to attack. Four months ago the general expectation on the part of the Chinese as well as the Japanese was that Russia would attack because the conditions were so favorable for them.

In September last year the Japanese were heavily engaged in China, fighting for a foothold in Shanghai and just beginning to advance in North China. Bogomoloff, the Soviet ambassador to Nanking, and General Lepline, the Soviet military attaché, flew to Moscow to advise the Kremlin that now was the best time to catch Japan at a disadvantage, and strike her from behind while she faced China.

Stalin relieved both men of their posts and they have not been heard of since. This characteristically rough repudiation of their advice proved beyond a doubt that the Red army was going to wait, because Stalin believes that time is on his side.

This he believes because the Far Eastern Red army, as an independent army, constantly grows in strength as Siberian industry grows. In the last ten years Siberia has increased in population by nearly three million, numbering now around 10,000,000. It is or can be almost entirely independent of Western Russia.

The coal of the Kuznetsk basin, the iron of Magnitogorsk, the arsenals, chemical works, and tank and tractor factories of the Urals can supply the Far Eastern army with everything from guns to transport. They even claim to have their own airplane factories in Siberia.

Furthermore many foreign military observers agree that although the Red army in Europe must have been badly hit by the execution of Marshal Tukhachevsky and his seven best generals, the Far Eastern army was relatively untouched. All the victims belonged to the European army. Blucher-Galen, commander-in-chief of the Far Eastern army, is apparently more powerful than ever.

On the other hand, the re-introduction of political commissars in all the fighting forces of the Soviet Union is not only a sign of the distrust Stalin entertains of his army but in the opinion of every foreign observer is bound to weaken its offensive power. It must be onerous enough to every Red officer in peace time to have to submit every order to counter-signature by a Communist party man, but what of war time? To wage a battle with a party spy at the elbow of each officer must be difficult indeed. Yet it should be remembered that Bolsheviks did it successfully once before when the infant Red army, political commissars and all fought off the Allied intervention.

The Far Eastern air fleet, however, is admittedly untouched either by the slaughter of the generals or by the system of political commissars. Soviet war pilots alone among the Red army officers, do not have to carry a commissar because there is no room for him.

It is as good as your life is worth to ask questions in Vladivostok about details of the army, but I finally made friends with a pilot officer, and obtained a rough idea of the strength of the Far Eastern air fleet. It is, he declared, larger than the entire Japanese air fleet, which lists 1,000 first-line warplanes. "How much larger?"

I asked. "Twice as large," he replied, and although he may seem to have been boasting, information from every other source indicates that in truth the Far Eastern air fleet may number with its reserves a total of 2,000 warplanes.

Admittedly the Russian pilots are extremely good, and far better than the Japanese, whose bravery is beyond reproach, but whose eyesight is not. Upon his air fleet, Stalin banks heavily. His air bases are numerous and far more handy for supplies than the Japanese bases in Manchuria and inner Mongolia. The Russians believe that in the first few weeks of aerial combat they could cripple, if not annihilate the Japanese air fleet. They certainly have shown in Spain that they are skillful air fighters, while the Japanese when fighting plane to plane with the Chinese, proved themselves defective in maneuver, and inferior to the Chinese in accuracy of fire.

Most important consideration of all, however, is Stalin's desire to wait for the completion of the second trans-Siberian Railway. My trip across Siberia and Russia gave me an unusual chance to weigh the importance of this major factor in the major conflict of the Far East. By good fortune I was able to obtain a map of the railway, which is being built in such secrecy that to mention it in the Soviet Union is bad form. The new railway requires another article to describe it.

The Great Game of Politics

the President's idea of what the people need, but the people themselves are not at all disturbed about the delay in getting it. No other deduction is possible from the lack of interest they show.

IT IS rather a strange situation. Last year the President insisted that at least two of these measures—wage and hour and crop control—were immediately essential; that the people had given him a mandate for them; that they were urgently needed. When Congress did not pass them in the regular session, he called a special session of Congress. When Congress failed to pass them at the special session, he renewed the demand when it again met in regular session. Now, four weeks after convening, no step toward passing them has been taken because of the prolonged filibuster on the anti-lynching bill. Yet there is no outcry from the people and no denunciation of the filibusters from the press.

THE REASONS are not far to seek. One of them clearly is the absence of any widespread popular sentiment behind the main features of the delayed Presidential program. As a matter of fact, it is fair to say that if there is not general indifference there is at least no excitement about it. Another reason is because it is so apparent that the Administration could have ended the delay at any moment the White House decided that the passage of its other bills was more important than the passage of the anti-lynching bill. One word from Mr. Roosevelt and Senator Barkley, his leader, would have sidetracked the latter so quick it would have made the head swim.

NOT ONLY that, but the sidetracking would have been done with great rejoicing and relief, because few politicians ever suffered more acutely than "Dear Alben" is suffering from the necessity of pressing this measure, which everybody knows he supports only under orders and would far rather oppose. Of course, it is now generally recognized that the Administration support of this bill is due to its desire to hold the Negro vote in the Northern States, through the Negro leaders and lobbyists who are gathered in Washington to see that the Administration does not weaken. And the real driving force behind the bill is Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, who, with Federal patronage and relief funds, his opponents charge, has succeeded in bagging practically the whole of the great Negro vote in the State. Without that vote, Mr. Guffey would not now be in the Senate, and without that vote Mr. Roosevelt it would not have carried Pennsylvania.

THE humanitarian pretenses of the bill and the contention that it would prevent lynchings have been shot to pieces by the debate. It stands out starkly as an exceedingly vicious proposal, the real motive behind which is the extremely sordid one of catering to the influential Negro leaders in the Northern States. Considering all the circumstances, it is not surprising the filibuster has been allowed to run four weeks without any public resentment toward the filibusters. A true grasp of the facts would justify popular anger, not toward the filibusters but toward the Administration politicians who hypocritically hiding behind a humanitarian cloak, and for purely political reasons, have insisted upon the passage of this bill ahead of everything else—tried—and unsuccessfully tried—to jam it through as though there were some great crisis to be met or situations to be saved.

Tobacco Experts Smoke Luckies 2 to 1

Lee Moore — who judged 1½ million lbs. of tobacco in 3 weeks—explains why so many independent experts "go for" Luckies

"MY LIFE has been tobacco," says Mr. Moore. "I started as a tobacco farmer. Then, in 1909, I became an independent buyer—in 1920 a warehouseman—and since 1927 I've had my own tobacco warehouse in Georgia.

"It's a matter of dollars and cents to me to be able to judge tobacco quickly and accurately. Now I know exactly what kind of tobacco Lucky Strike buys. So I've smoked Luckies for 11 years."

This is the honest opinion of an impartial expert who sells tobacco to all cigarette manufacturers, but who is not connected with any. And there are many other such experts who agree with Mr. Moore.

Sworn records show that, among independent tobacco experts—not connected with any cigarette manufacturer—Luckies have twice as many exclusive smokers as have all the other cigarettes combined.

German Cabbage

Hot cabbage, German style, is a popular variation of this economical and valuable vegetable.

One four-pound cabbage; four tablespoons shortening; one tablespoon granulated sugar; one tablespoon flour; one-fourth teaspoon pepper; one teaspoon salt; five tablespoons vinegar; one pint boiling water.

Cut the cabbage into eighths. Add the other ingredients and cook about twenty minutes, stirring occasionally. This quantity serves six.

Meat Loaf King with Creamed Potatoes. Six slices bread; one and one-half cups milk; two and one-fourth pounds ground round steak; three-fourths pound ground pork; one and one-half teaspoons salt; one-half teaspoon black pepper; one-half teaspoon poultry seasoning (or any preferred seasoning); three eggs; 12 to 14 potatoes; one and one-half cups thin cream sauce; chopped chives.

Dice bread and soak in milk. Mix meat and seasonings. Add eggs and bread to meat and work with hands to blend thoroughly. Pack into buttered ring mold, unmold on buttered baking pan and bake in moderate oven 350 degrees F. for one and one-half hours. While loaf is baking, prepare potatoes, unless boiled potatoes already are on hand.

Boil potatoes whole, drain, remove skins and combine with hot sauce in top of double boiler. Cover and heat over hot water for 10 minutes. When meat loaf is done, remove to hot platter, turn creamed potatoes into center and sprinkle with chives or chopped parsley.

This recipe yields six to eight servings. Baked potatoes are even better than boiled for flavor. Ground veal may be substituted for beef.

Fig Mousse

One cup heavy cream, whipped; one-fourth cup powdered sugar; one teaspoon lemon juice; one egg white, beaten until very stiff; one cup cooked figs, cut fine.

Add sugar and vanilla to cream. Fold in egg white, then add figs. Place in individual molds in mechanical ice-box until firm.

Baked Apples with Jelly

Six firm tart apples; one eight-ounce glass currant jelly. Core apples and pare one-third way down from stem end. Fill cavity of each apple with currant jelly. Place apples in baking dish.

Melt the rest of the jelly with one-half cup water and pour around the base of the apples. Bake covered in a moderate oven 375 degrees F. until apples are tender. Remove cover during last few minutes of baking, so apples will brown. Serve hot or cold, with thin cream, or whipped. (Grape jelly also gives excellent flavor.)

Dates-Nut Bon Bons

Put pasteurized dates, or use the ready-pitted variety.

One-half pound walnut meats; one egg white; two and one-half cups dates; two tablespoons sugar.

Put dates and nuts through food chopper, using fine knife. Knead mixture and form into shape of a date. Let stand in ice-box overnight. Beat egg white slightly, add sugar and dip "bon bons" in mixture. Place on buttered tin or baking dish and bake at 300 degrees F. until crisp.

Scalloped String Beans

This recipe for variety in string beans comes with the reminder that the flavor and vitamin content are retained when vegetables are cooked properly in a small quantity of water.

Three-fourths pound string beans, or one can string beans; three tablespoons butter; three tablespoons flour; one-half teaspoon salt, pepper; one and one-half cups milk; one-half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce; three-fourths cup buttered crumbs; dash paprika.

Cut the beans in one-inch sections and cook in a small amount of boiling water until tender, about 30 minutes. Make a white sauce of the other ingredients. Melt the butter, stir in the flour and seasonings and when smooth add the milk. Beat until smooth and thick and add the sauce, or any preferred flavoring sauce. Mix with the beans and place in a greased baking dish. Sprinkle with buttered crumbs and paprika and bake in a moderate oven 375 degrees F. for 15 minutes.

Popular Canapes

Canapes are growing in popularity, particularly when served before the formal dinner. Cream Roquefort cheese with butter and spread on crackers, or toast triangles. Equal parts of anchovy paste, or mashed anchovies, and creamed cheese; sardines creamed with mayonnaise, grated onion and lemon juice, are good appetizers. Serve salted almonds with this.

broiled sausages. Other ideas are: Chopped watercress and a slice of cucumber on circles of white bread; ground chicken and almonds, moistened with mayonnaise, spread on Melba toast.

Try spreading large, crisp potato chips with anchovy paste, blended with a few drops of lemon juice. Do these at the last minute.

plates in this group curl up slightly at the edges and come in three sizes—for the main dinner course, for salad and for bread and butter.

Solid grey china is making a decided bid for favor this season, being most effective against bright linens. Square plates are "in" again, being matched with a large square bowl for salads. The fact that all the new plates are matched in salad bowl testifies to the popularity of the salad course.

Individual Glasses

Contagion from common head colds often could be prevented if simple precautions were used at home. Most bathrooms have only one drinking glass, yet space for more is at a premium. Now the stores are showing a chromium wall bracket for three glasses. Furthermore, each glass is inscribed "mother," "sister," "father," "brother," or "guest." So that eliminates all excuses on space and identification. This is an unusual gift suggestion.

Another bathroom novelty is a slender chromium rod with rubber suction caps that sticks to the wall anywhere. Home laundering of silk lingerie and hose is much more satisfactory when rod drying is used. This adjustable rod will eliminate groans from the man whose towels are always being moved to make space for drying silk stockings.

DISCUSS GOOFY RULE ABOUT FOUL IN BOXING

By Pat Robinson
(N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—(INS).—When is a foul not a foul?

Several years ago we had a veritable epidemic of fouls. They were the easy way out for what the boys in the cauliflower racket refer to as "one of those things," which is their polite manner of mentioning a dive or a barney.

In those unlamented days, about half the fights seemed to end in a foul. Came a glancing blow on the hip that wouldn't have disturbed one of the Dionnes and a fighter promptly grabbed his groin with both hands and sank in apparent agony to the floor until the referee awarded him the fight when he promptly hopped up and went out to dance.

Then the New York boxing commission ruled that henceforth there would be no such thing as a foul—with reservations. The commission meant that nobody could win a fight on a foul but a fighter could lose a fight on a foul.

That may sound goofy to the uninitiated but it's a fact. The commission recognized fouls in that a man who was fouled was awarded the particular round or rounds in which he was hit low. BUT—and mark this well—if he was fouled so badly as to be totally incapacitated, he would be counted out.

In other words, the commission put a premium on severe fouls. If Joe Glutz hit Larry Schmaltz low, say, in the third round, the referee would take that round away from Joe as a penalty. But if Joe hit Larry such a terrific low foul punch that Larry couldn't get up for half an hour, then Larry was promptly counted out and lost the fight on a knockout.

Silly as the rule appears on paper, it really has worked well.

The fighters suddenly discovered that they were not being fouled like they had been and when a punch did accidentally stray out of bounds the new cups were supposed, and actually did, furnish sufficient protection for them.

Fighters occasionally had a round taken away from them for low punches but the fights continued.

Then came two recent fights in Madison Square Garden and once again the foul question came to the fore.

Fred Apostoli accidentally hit Fred Steele low, the blow apparently paralyzing Steele's leg. Steele hobbled away for almost half a minute while referee Art Donovan held Apostoli in check.

Steele was wearing one of the old-fashioned protectors and not one of the modern cups.

Donovan's action was generally commended. It gave Steele some chance to recover and saved the fight.

Then came the Henry Armstrong-Enrico Venturi battle and again Art Donovan was in the middle in more ways than one. This fight demonstrated the foul rule better than words.

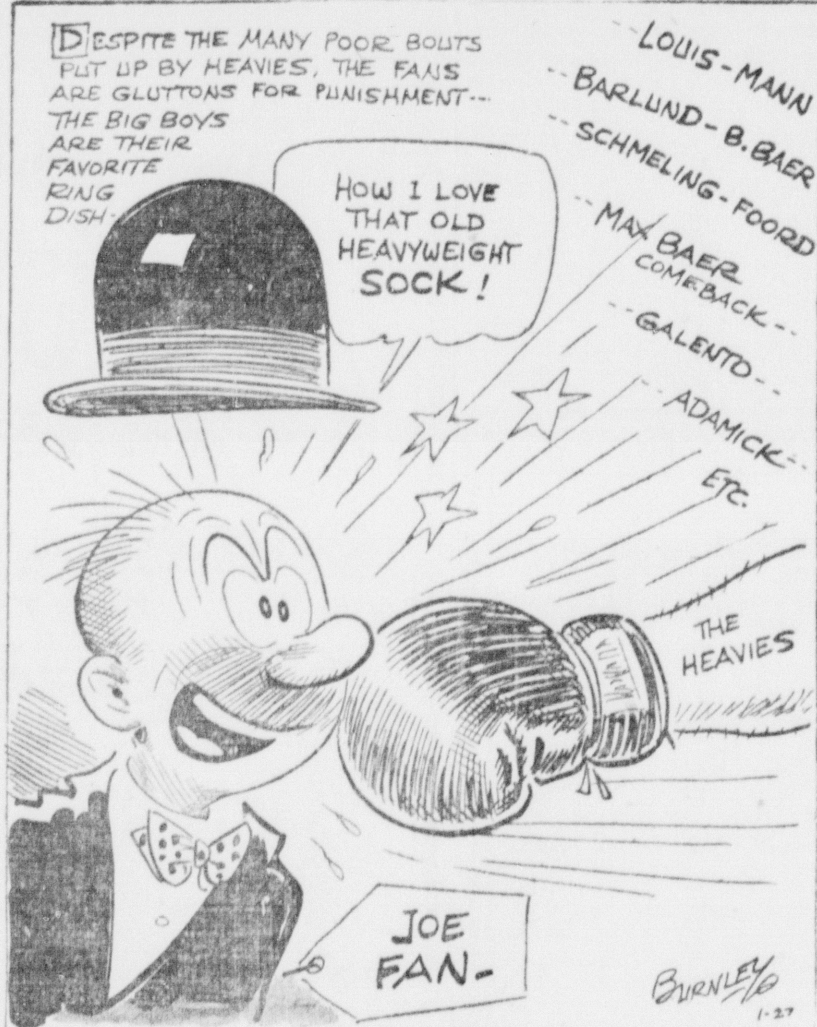

Armstrong lost one round for a low punch. But the next time he fouled Venturi, the latter went down and was counted out. The mild foul cost Armstrong the loss of a round, but the severe foul won him the fight!

Donovan said that if Venturi had been able to finish the round, he would have won the round, but since he couldn't finish he won the round, so to speak, but lost the fight!

It would seem that the rule might well be amended so as to give the referee discretion either to count out a man he believes is faking a foul, or if he believes he actually was fouled, to permit the injured man five or ten minutes in which to recover and let the fight continue. This rule, so amended, would be by no means perfect but it would at least be a step in the right direction.

Big Boys Go To Town

By BURNLEY

After a period of winter inactivity, the heavyweight beak busters are emerging from their hibernation. Dire doings are on tap, with many of the leading big boys scheduled to trade leather within the next couple of months.

Max Schmeling moves into the second bout of his time-up campaign in Hamburg, Germany, when he takes on the fragile-chinned Ben Ford of England.

Joe Louis, the most active heavy champ in decades, will get a severe test late next month against the crazy, hard-bellied Nathan Mann.

Gunnar Barlund, the phlegmatic Finn, is dated up with that clouting colossus, Buddy Baer, in what looks like a bang-up brawl. Two Ton Tony Galento, colorful Jersey fat boy who has belted his way back into the picture, is due to try his rough house tactics out on several prominent heavies in the near future.

Jack Kearns' second edition of Dempsey, Jimmy Adamick, is about ready to crash into the upper crust, and Mike Jacobs may pair him with a big name foe.

Max Baer, of all people, will be inflicted on us again when he meets the Farr-Braddock winner.

GRANT CALLS RIGGS GREATEST PROSPECT

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 27.—(INS).—Take it from Bryan "Bittsy" Grant, Atlanta's bit of tennis dynamite, this boy Bobby Riggs, Chicago, in time will be regarded as one of the world's greatest netters.

And "Bittsy," who has played them all, should know.

Grant, who again won the annual Miami Biltmore Men's Tennis Championships, in which he was defending titleholder—a crown he won last year from Donald Budge in an upset final—'is confident Riggs is the greatest American prospect to come forward in many a year.

"He will never have the finishing off shots that Don Budge uses," commented the Atlantan, "but he is the 'think-iest' player I have ever met. He thinks his shots out in advance like a fellow who had been playing the top-notchers for years. I have never seen a youngster like him on the courts. I don't see how he can miss being great. He's good now, but mark my word, he'll be regarded as great in a year or so."

Grant went on to explain that Riggs plays a vastly different type of tennis than Don Budge's game. "Don overpowers 'em," commented Bittsy. "He's got the powerful finishing shots and the physique to back them up. Riggs could never be that type player. Bobby resembles more the European type that for ten years have made it miserable for U. S. players. He plays strictly a backcourt game. But how he plays it."

The Atlantan was perfectly satisfied with the new ranking list. "I deserved no better than No. 4 the way I played last year," he argued. "I hope I can better that this year but these legs are a year older. I have to be faster with my thinking to make up for any apparent slowing up in my legs which are my chief asset in court covering. Riggs deserved that No. 2 spot they gave him and he and Budge should make a great Davis Cup combination."

Grant also had a word of praise for Frank Kovacs, gangling Oakland, Cal., youth who played in the tournament here. "He's got the build and the strokes," he commented. "In addition he's only 18 years old and will be plenty tough in another year."

Streamliners Advance in Speed and Luxuries

Power, comfort and safety are characteristics of the new streamliners on regular runs over the Santa Fe and Northwestern-Union Pacific lines between Chicago and the Pacific coast. The pictures suggest the conveniences of the Diesel-powered, air-conditioned caravans of stainless steel. The tavern car, one of the features of the City of Los Angeles, is decorated after the patterns of western hostilities of old bonanza days, and appropriately called "Little Nugget". Running time has been reduced to 39 1/4 hours between Los Angeles and Chicago by the Super Chief.

HELPFUL HINTS

Here's How!

The prize-winning milk drink produced by a Chicago soda clerk in a national-wide contest, sponsored by a national association of drugstores, calls for this formula:

"One scoop ice cream; five ounces of milk; one tablespoon peanut butter; one-half ounce vanilla syrup; small amount of nutmeg. Whirl in mixer and serve in a ten-ounce glass, topped with whipped cream." A heavy egg-beater, or electric mixer, will prepare this novelty at home.

Stained Nails
Stained nails and hands may be improved by rubbing them with lemon, vinegar, tomato, rhubarb juice, cucumber, plum stone, or with cornmeal moistened with buttermilk. Several of these items also act as a bleach.

Save time, money and energy by planning menus a week in advance. Then make the market list and order in quantity, as far as possible.
